While mediation is not a new way to resolve conflict, it has not been systematically employed to resolve conflict within the church. In his new book, PEACEMAKING: THE QUIET POWER, Terje Hausken unites his experience & training as a mediator & as a pastor to make a compelling & practical case for the use of mediation techniques to resolve high conflict situations within the church. The book opens with four case studies of churches in high conflict. It then discusses the mediation principles most applicable to church conflicts. Finally, practical advice is offered on how to establish mediation programs within churches for dealing with specific high conflict situations as well as how to design ongoing mediation programs that help prevent minor disagreements from becoming destructive conflicts. Hausken says the church's need for more effective ways to deal with conflict is critical. He notes several reasons why conflict in the church is more apparent. He sees more stress-generated conflicts among church members today than in the past. There is also more conflict among church staff members as the autocratic management position of some senior ministers becomes less workable. Finally, there is the conflict generated by the recent flood of sexual misconduct allegations in the church.

PEACEMAKING: THE QUIET POWER, CONFLICT RESOLUTION FOR CHURCHES THROUGH MEDIATION, offers helpful & theoretically sound advice for both Clergy & lay persons; be they denominational leaders or the local devil's advocate.

Includes the Church's Constitution and canons, which have separate title pages and paging, and are also published separately.
